WOULD I LIE TO YOU ABOUT COPYRIGHT?

Anna Theis and Neil Sprunt
WOULD I LIE TO YOU (ABOUT COPYRIGHT)?

1. The monkey owns the copyright in this image
2. Nobody owns the copyright in this image
3. The photographer owns the copyright in this image

Which is true?

Answer: Nobody owns the copyright
The work is in the public domain.
WOULD I LIE TO YOU ABOUT COPYRIGHT?
Case 1

A bakery in St.Ives (in Cornwall) imitated the style of a work by the artist Magritte in a poster advertising their baked goods.

Magritte’s estate became aware of this following conversations with the Tate (St Ives) and the matter was settled out of court.
Case 2

A restaurant chain in Puerto Rico was successfully sued by a man claiming he owned the copyright in a Chicken Sandwich.
A Dutch cheese manufacturer has taken a rival cheese maker to court claiming they have breached the copyright in the taste (and scent) of their cheese product.
So which one is true?

1. A Cornish pastiche?
2. Copyright in a chicken sandwich, a recipe for disaster?
3. Cheese and copyright, who gives Edam!
The aim of the game...

• Introduce a playful element to copyright training
• To also apply to education/research
• To encourage engagement/participation in copyright matters
• To promote discussion and analysis between peers
WOULD I LIE TO YOU ABOUT COPYRIGHT?

Anna Theis and Neil Sprunt